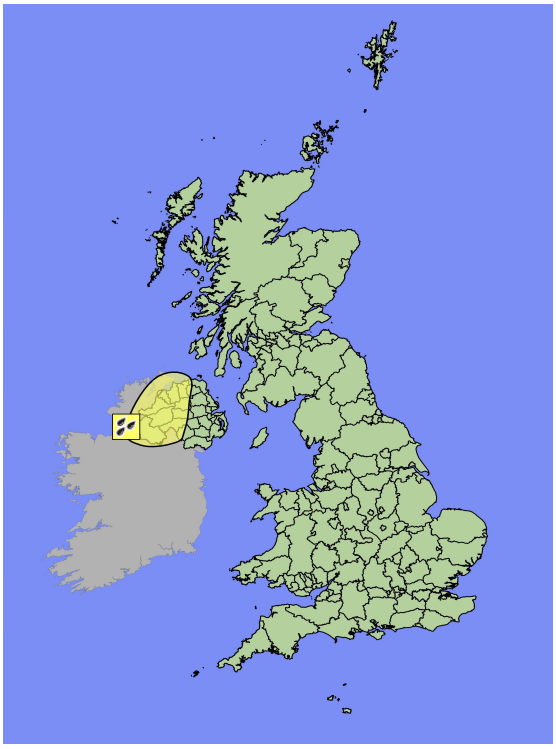
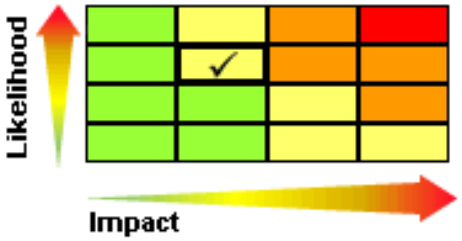
National Severe Weather Warning Service





Chief Forecasters Assessment
Narrow bands of thundery showers have formed in a deeply unstable airmass across Northern Ireland. At present these are affecting central parts of Northern Ireland, but a further band may move north to affect the more western parts later this evening.

The Met Office have issued a Yellow Warning of Rain

Valid from 20:00 on Mon, 13th Aug 2012 until 23:55 on Mon, 13th Aug 2012

Heavy thundery showers will continue to affect parts of Northern Ireland this evening. The public should be aware of the risk of localised surface water flooding
